

Effective early intervention

for infants born deaf or hard of hearing (with congenital, permanent hearing loss) includes:

- Early amplification & support for acquisition of aural-oral language
- Early access to & support for acquisition of visual-manual language
- Preventing delays in language acquisition and development

...because with early identification of hearing loss coupled with early intervention, delays in language acquisition and development are no longer "inevitable."

From the earliest opportunities... take advantage of:

- Early detection
- Early intervention
- Technological advances
- Family supports
- Periodic re-assessment (of services & of child's development)
- Collective network of experience(s)

You may wish to visit this website as well:

www.experiencejournal.com

Representing the "collective wisdom" of families and their health care providers

